ACADEMIC CORNER

INCORRECT OMISSIONS OF PREPOSITIONS

The following are examples of mistakes made through the omission of the preposition after certain words :

- Wish for a thing                      not wish a thing                      Don't say : He does not wish any reward.
Say : He does not wish for any reward.
- Write to a person                      not write a person                      Don't say : I shall write him tomorrow.
Say : I shall write to him tomorrow.

UNNECESSARY WORDS

The words below do not require a preposition to go with them because they have within them the meaning of the preposition :

- Answer                                      (=reply to)                                      Don't say : Please answer to my question
Say : Please answer my question.
- Approach                                      (=come near to)                                      Don't say : Do not approach to that house.
Say : Do not approach that house.
- Ask    (=put a question to)                                      Don't say : I asked to the teacher about it
Say : I asked the teacher about it.
- Attack    (=go and fight against)                                      Don't say : They attacked against the enemy
Say : They attacked the enemy.
